Mean temperature of the Month, 64° 36 — Mean heat of the warmest day, 73 1-3. —
Mean temperature of the coolest day, 54° 2-3.

REMARKS.—The mean temperature of this month, is 1° 26 lower—its coolest day, 2-3 higher—and its warmest day, 2-3 lower, than those of September, 1817.—Thus the mean of the two extremes of both months is 64°.—Of ninety observations, nine marks Rain; this is equivalent to three rainy days in the month.—
The Gale which took place on the 8th and 9th, preceded the equinox at too great a distance to be called the equinoctial gale; we must therefore assign this name to the strong winds that prevailed from the NW on the 21st. It blew with some violence, and from 10 A. M. the day was cloudy, with a hazy atmosphere.—The great proportion of clear and serene weather in this month, has been favorable to Indian Corn, and to Fruit.—Of Apples, the quantity in this State is 50 per cent. below an average of ten years. This may be attributed to the fogs and rains, which happened for several days in succession when the trees were in bloom. Of three Crops, which are the staple products of the south part of the State of Rhode-Island, there is a failure of one-half in the Barley and Potatoes, and perhaps an increase of one-quarter in the Corn. If we wanted more testimony to an established fact, we should adduce this new proof, that Barley and Potatoes cannot bear heat and drought like Corn. It is only of late years, that the second of these products has become here an important branch of agricultural industry, and we now estimate the quantity of Potatoes exported from this Island, to exceed a yearly average of Thirty thousand Bushels, and this ratio is fast increasing.

Miscellany.

From the New-York Mercantile Advertiser.

Edinburgh Review.

OF the various and interesting subjects in the 59th Number of the Edinburgh Review, re-published in this city, the leading article is a Review of the different works recently published on the subject of the possibility of approaching the North Pole—in which we have a condensed and luminous view of the numerous expeditions which at different periods from the earliest history of navigation to the present time, have been fitted out, either with the view of exploring the arctic circle, or in the hope of discovering a North West passage to India. It appears to be the opinion of the Reviewers, that the expectations so fondly cherished by those who planned the recent expedition will be greatly disappointed, and that it will meet the fate of all former expeditions undertaken for the same object.

This Number also contains an elaborate and splendid review of the 4th Cantos of Childe Harold, or rather an analysis of the genius and writings of Lord Byron, in the course of which we are presented with a curious and striking analogy between the genius and character of J. J. Rousseau and the noble poet. The life and writings of Dr. Watson, Bishop of Landaff is also reviewed, and in a style and spirit which does credit to the heart and understanding of the writer, and does ample justice to the merits and memory of the venerable and liberal, though neglected prelate. We also find a very important article on the present state of parties in England, from which we may form a tolerably adequate judgment of the relative weight and future conflicts of the ministerial and opposition forces in that country. But of all the articles in this invaluable Journal, the one of all others calculated to excite the deepest interest and the proudest feelings in the mind of every American, is the review on "Birbeck's Notes on America." In the present dearth of intelligence, we do not know that we can perform for our readers a more acceptable service than by presenting them with the following extracts from the able review of that very popular and interesting work.

EXTRACT—page 137.

"It is impossible to close this interesting volume, without casting our eyes upon the marvellous empire of which Mr. Birbeck paints the growth in colours far more striking than any heretofore used in portraying it. Where is this prodigious increase of numbers, this vast extension of dominion, to end? What bounds has Nature set to the progress of this mighty nation? Let our jealousy burn as it may; let our intolerance of America be as unreasonably violent as we please; still it is plain, that she is a power in spite of us, rapidly rising to supremacy; or, at least, that each year so mightily augments her strength, as to overtake, by a most sensible distance, even the most formidable of her competitors. In foreign commerce, she comes nearer to England than any other maritime power; and already her mercantile navy is within a few thousand tons of our own! If she goes on as rapidly for two or three years, she must overtake and outstrip us.—Men's minds are naturally turned towards the chances of her being retarded; and the first and most obvious has been the prospect of her dividing into several states.

"The war has proved this expectation to be in a great measure, if not entirely, true. Those who indulged it held that howsoever adapted to the purposes of internal government, the Federal Constitution must fall to pieces before a foreign enemy; that war must be the end of the Union. A war with England, the power most likely to divide the States—no only power having a natural interest and party among the American people—was, happily for the Union, begun on principles so extravagant and conducted with such want of moderation, as to strengthen the party opposed to the English, and to knit in one indissoluble body the whole States of America.

"What chance, then, is there of time offsetting, by its silent pace, the which the ruder shock of foreign conflict has failed to accomplish? The question of the dissolution is intimately connected with the causes of the peaceable union of this great empire.

"We perceive a nation rapidly progressing (as they themselves term it) in language borrowed from our own great poet) towards universal dominion over the New World. Its present population of ten millions will in another generation be increased to twenty; and the new country now forming to the westward, ten millions or two more.—

"The question is, Can such a vast mass of people, spread over so large a territory, be kept together by a feeble government? And the enemies of the United States have seldom any less than a ready answer, concluding, that their fate is to become the slaves of a millitary despotism, or the prey of internal dissension. No one seems to think the subsistence of the Federal Union possible.

"It might be proper, however, to consider the real ground of stability which the government of America possesses, before we decide in so positive a manner against it. There can be little doubt, that the whole question turns upon the difference of American and European society, and the total want, in the former, of that race of political characters which abounds in the latter. In America, all men have abundant occupation of their own, without thinking of the State. Every person is deeply interested, and perpetually engaged in driving his trade, and cultivating his land; and little time is left to any one for thinking of state affairs, except as a subject of conversation. As a business, they engage the attention of no one except the rulers of the country; and even they keep the concerns of the public subordinate to their own. The Governor of a State is generally a large land-owner and farmer of his own ground. A foreign minister is the active member of a lucrative and laborious profession, quitting it for a few months, and returning to its gains and its toils when his mission is ended. The business of the Senate occupies but a few weeks in the year; and no man devotes himself so much to its duties, as to leave it doubtful to what class of the industrious community he properly belongs. The race of mere statesmen, so well known among us in the Old World, is wholly unknown in the New; and, until it springs up, even the foundations of a change cannot be considered as laid. The Americans, no doubt, are, like other freemen, decided partisans, and warm political combatants;—but what project or chance can counterbalance, in their eyes, the benefits conferred by the Union of cultivating their soil, and pursuing their traffic freely and gainfully in their capacity of private individuals? A preacher of insurrection might safely be left with such personages as the American farmers; and, until the whole frame of society alters, even a great increase of political characters will not enable those persons successfully to appeal to the bulk of the community, with the prospect of splitting the Union. The cautious and economical character of the Federal Government seems admirably adapted to secure its hold over the affections of a rational and a frugal people."

From a Paris Paper.

Visit to the Interior of a Pyramid.

We have received from M. de Niebuhr, the Prussian Minister at Rome and one of the most distinguished literary characters of Germany, the authentic declaration of M. Belzoni, a Roman Architect, relative to his having effected an entrance into the interior of a pyramid a project which has been in vain attempted by many celebrated travellers for centuries past.

"On the 18th February last, M. Belzoni, at his own expense, began his project of opening a way into the second pyramid of Gizeh, called that of Chefrém. In the first place, he caused an excavation to be made towards the northern front, by following a perpendicular line from its centre. Having discovered that there was no opening in this place, he commenced further researches about thirty feet east of the middle, and on the 2d March he found the real entrance, which is a gallery of granite that led to a hanging door also of granite. Having caused it to be raised, he found himself in an horizontal gallery, from whence he descended perpendicularly into a second, and thence by a staircase into a third, which conducted him into an apartment where he found a sarcophagus containing human bones embalmed. Proceeding by a shelving gallery, he arrived in another horizontal one, passing along which he perceived about half way a passage that led towards the south, into a second apartment. At the extremity of this horizontal plane, M. Belzoni saw a niche, cut for the purpose of fixing a granite door that lay near. From this place he ascended by a steep passage about the height of 47 feet to a stone wall by which it was closed. At this spot he perceived stones cut and laid in such a manner as to close the entrance of this passage near the base of the pyramid."

From this account of M. Belzoni it is proved the pyramids were the tombs of the Royal Family. It appears to M. de Niebuhr that the pyramid of Chefrém is not in its original state. The sarcophagus must have been plundered at some period or other; and the doors of stone which have been found, were displaced at the time of this hostile invasion. We may presume that it was the Persians, under Cambyses, who opened and pillaged it. The Egyptians, during the interval of their independence, might have closed the entrance, not being able to repair the devastations committed by the enemy.

Crystallization of Tin.

This new art was, we are informed, discovered accidentally about three years ago, in France, by a Monsieur Baget, who gave it the name of Morle Metallique.

que or Metallic Watering. Another Frenchman, near Brussels, however, contests the palm of originality; and in truth, the principle has long been one of the least secrets either in chemistry or metallurgy, though we believe its useful application is entirely new. It depends simply upon the action of acids, whether pure or mixed, and indifferently degrees of solution, on alloys of Tin. The common Vitriolic Acid, we believe, answers the purpose as fully as any other more expensive acid agent. The process we find described in the public prints is as follows:—"Dissolve four ounces of Muric acid of Soda in eight ounces of water, and add 2 ounces of Nitric Acid:—to 8 oz Water, 2 oz Nitric Acid, and 3 oz Muric Acid:—or 8 oz Water, 2 oz Muric Acid, and 1 oz sulphuric Acid. Either of these mixtures is to be poured warm upon a sheet of tinned iron, placed upon a vessel of stone-ware; it is to be poured on in separate portions, till the sheet is completely watered; it is then to be plunged into water, slightly acidulated and washed." The operation is completed by drying.

The meanest tin pan in our kitchens, submitted to this easy process, instead of its pallid metallic surface, imitates mother of pearl in its tone or colour, and shoots forth into an infinity of figures and reflections, equal to enamel, and full of rich variety in design. By subjecting the iron to different degrees of heat the variety of the forms is increased; some parts are granular; others are like architectural ruins; others grand natural phenomena of wood, and mountain, and cataract; others a silvery sunset darting rays along the expanse; others simple leaves and flowers; others cubes, cones, and all that geometry embraces; in fine, there is no shape which the imagination can conceive that accident may not produce in those exquisite sports of the chemical power.

MISSOURI

ST. LOUIS, SEPT. 4.

Expedition to the Yellow Stone.

ON Sunday the 30th inst. a battalion of the regiment, 300 strong, embarked at Belle Fontaine to ascend the Missouri river to the mouth of the Yellow Stone. The expedition is commanded by Lieut. Col. Talbot Chambers. The captains, Martin, Magee and Riley; the lieutenants, Shade, Clark, Kavanaugh Field, and Francis Smith, go out with their respective companies. It is intended that the expedition shall encamp during the winter at the mouth of the Kansas; and continuing its voyage in the spring, shall reach the point of destination in the course of next summer.

The Yellow Stone enters the Missouri in lat. 48 degrees north; and in long 27 degrees west from Washington City. The intended post will be at its mouth. The United States will then have a military establishment one thousand eight hundred miles west of the Mississippi, and nearly 100 miles further north than the city of Quebec.

The officers carry with them the seeds and grains which are expected to thrive in that climate that the post may have within itself some resource against the failure of contractors. Wheat, rye, barley, oats, are expected to do well there. They attain perfection even at the east of Selkirk's establishment on Lake Assiniboine, three degrees further north. The Mandan corn will find itself in its own climate at the mouth of the Yellow Stone. In fact, all the grains, plants, and vegetables which flourish at Quebec or Montreal may be expected to be raised there, as the climate in that interior region of the North American continent is known to be near ten degrees milder than in the same parallel on the Atlantic coast.

Our fellow citizen Manuel Lissa, so well known for his enterprise, will precede the expedition, to prepare the Indians for its reception. He will quiet their apprehensions by shewing the benevolent and humane intentions of the American government and shall silence the British emissaries who shall represent the expedition as an act of war against the Indian nation.

The establishment of this post will be an era in the history of the west. It will be to the source and root of the fatal British influence which has for so many years armed the Indian nations against our western frontiers. It carries the arms and power of the United States to the ground which has heretofore been exclusively occupied by the British North West and Hudson's Bay companies, and which has been the true seat of the British power over the Indian mind. Now the American arms and the American policy will be displayed upon the same theatre. The North West and Hudson's Bay companies will be shut out from the commerce of the Missouri and Mississippi Indians; the American traders will penetrate in safety the recesses of the rocky mountains in search of its rich fur, a commerce yielding a million per annum will descend the Missouri; and the Indians finding their wants supplied by American traders, their domestic wars restrained by American policy, will learn to respect the American name.

The name of the Yellow Stone river will hereafter be familiar to the American ear.—That a stream of its magnitude should heretofore have been so little known is a proof of the immensity of our country. How little has it been thought, that 1800 miles up the Missouri, a river was to be found equal in length and breadth to the Ohio? Yet such is the character of the Yellow Stone, or Roche Jaune, as it was called by the French. One of its branches, the Big Horn, issues from a lake near the Rio del Norte, on the confines of New Mexico, and is navigable for many miles. The Yellow Stone itself issues from a Lake in the Rocky Mountains. It was descended by Capt Clark on his return from the Pacific Ocean. He found it deep, rapid and navigable from the place where he struck it to its mouth, a distance of 350 miles. Below the junction of the Big Horn the width was usually from 500 to 800 yards, and sometimes a mile. Innumerable were the herds of Buffalo and other game which ranged upon it. This abundance of the game is a proof of the richness of the country.—In fact, the traders speak of the face of the country upon the Yellow Stone, the serenity of the climate, the rapidity and clearness of the waters, in terms of admiration.

VIRGINIA

NOFOLK, OCT. 12.

The Macedonian Frigate.

We announce with much regret, the arrival in this harbour of the U. S. frigate Macedonian, J. Downes, Esq. commander, in distress. She came in on Saturday afternoon, and proceeded immediately to the navy yard at Gosport. She was distressed in a severe gale, which commenced from S. E. on Saturday P. M. 26th Sept. in lat. 35, 37, long. 55 and shifted on the morning of the 27th to N. W. during which she had her mainmast carried away by the board; her fore and main masts sprung, and was compelled to cut away her fore and main top masts with the loss of some other parts. In the consequence, and three of her boats.

The Macedonian sailed from Boston on the 21st of last month, bound to the Pacific Ocean, completely fitted for a two years cruise. The time in which she left that port could scarcely be exceeded; but how now altered! After being only six days at sea, she returns to port with no other vestige of her former grandeur than her wooden walls, and in appearance precisely as she entered the port of New-York when a prize to the gallant Decatur. The tempest is represented to have been indescribably awful, and the situation of the Macedonian perilous in the extreme.

October 13

From the Spanish Maine.

Capt. Brickley, of the San Marcin, who arrived here last evening from Lagaira, states, that at the time of his sailing, Sept. 8, the Patriots were besieging Cumana with a force of 2000 men. The Royalists however, were numerous and well supplied with provisions and military stores, both of which, it was understood, the Patriots stood much in need of. It was the general opinion that no fighting would take place until December, about which time they calculated that the plains would be sufficiently dry for their operations.

COLUMBIA

WASHINGTON-CITY, OCT. 13.

Private letters from Alabama state, that a court was at that time sitting (17th September,) at Fort Claiborn, in Monroe county a spot which, until the late Indian war, was scarcely known to white people except the few who lived among the Indians. It is on the banks of the Alabama, about 60 miles above Fort Stoddard. Two years ago there was but a single cabin on the spot where the town now stands, and it is computed that the town now contains twenty-seven hundred inhabitants.—Although the whole of the land still belongs to the Indian nation, there are a court house and jail, as well as a variety of private buildings erected for the purposes of public justice and of domestic comfort; and, it is with regret it is stated, that the jail was crowded with criminals, some of whose cases were of a highly interesting nature. An Indian, for one, had been indicted for the murder of a white man, and six or eight white men had been indicted for having (as the reader may remember to have seen it stated some time ago) murdered several Indian prisoners, who were shot and killed when bound, and passing under the protection of a guard from Fort Claiborn to Fort Montgomery. This is a crime, if established, calling for all the energy of the law. A disposition is said to prevail among the people, favorable to the repression of such outrages, and for the prosecution of every species of offence against the laws and against the public peace. These are objects which we had rather see effected by civil than by military law.

A letter received in this city (Washington,) from a gentleman living at Alexandria, at the falls of Red River, in Louisiana, under date of 10th September gives a flattering view of the rapidly improving state of that country. "Lands and towns lots," the writer says "have risen beyond all expectation. We have now at Alexandria, twenty mercantile establishments whose imports may be estimated at home 250 to 300,000 dollars per annum. The crops of this parish will this year amount to about four hundred thousand dollars, at the present price of cotton: they are now very promising, and our parish generally enjoys unusual prosperity. Land, which was bought in 1806 at fifty cents per acre, has recently been sold, in a tract of 800 acres, at 28 dollars per acre."

NEW-YORK

NEW-YORK, OCT. 20.

From Lagaira.

We learn from Captain Hansen of the brig Warrior, who arrived here last evening in 20 days from Lagaira, that a few days before he sailed, several parties of privateers made an attack upon the town which they bombarded during a whole day, but were repulsed with a considerable loss.

October 21.

From Rio Janeiro.

A passenger in the schooner Gazette, from Rio Janeiro, informs, that no political events of consequence had recently occurred at that place. The Portuguese remained firm in their determination to hold possession of the province. About the middle of June the troops had marched against Artigas, who retreated about 300 miles into the interior, he being his policy to avoid an action. The news of the capture of Pensacola had reached Rio Janeiro, and war between the U. States and Spain was believed to be inevitable.

NEWPORT,

Saturday, Oct. 24, 1818.

Arrival of the Vice-President.

The Vice-President of the United States, accompanied by Col. George Gibb, and Col. Murray, of New York, arrived here this morning in the Revenue Cutter Active, Capt. Cahoon, from New-York.—Salutes were fired on his arrival, from Forts Wolcott and Adams, and from the Cutter.—Various demonstrations of respect will be offered in the course of the day, evincive of the respect of our citizens for the second Magistrate of the Country.

Rhode-Island Legislature.

The Legislature of this State will convene at Providence on Monday next, agreeably to law.

Secretary of the Navy.

The Hon. B. W. CROWNSHIELD, has resigned his office as Secretary of the Navy.—A letter from Washington dated the 15th inst. is published in the Baltimore Patriot of Saturday last, giving it as the prevailing opinion at the seat of government, that the Hon. C. D. GOLDEN, Mayor of the City of New-York, would be selected by the President, as successor to Mr. Crownshield.—The letter adds, that "his appointment would be hailed with pleasure by the Officers of the Navy generally"; and that "a confident expectation is entertained, that he will be selected."

Meeting of Congress.

Agreeably to a resolve, passed the last session of Congress, that body is to assemble at Washington on the 16th of November next.

Connecticut Constitution.

Gov. Wolcott, of Connecticut, has issued his Proclamation announcing that the New Constitution had been legally adopted by the people of the State, and has become the supreme law of the State.

England and America.

The National Intelligencer of Saturday last, speaking of the article on American affairs, which we copied in our last from the Liverpool Mercury of August 28th, says:—

"It shows that there are in that country some (we hope many) who understand its real interests, and who in the same spirit as animates the great body of our people, desire to see between the two countries an interminable peace.—Indeed, all the accounts we receive from England, from authentic sources, bespeak a similar disposition on the part of the government of England; and the speaking of the newspapers notwithstanding, amicable conferences which are now going on in London, as the papers tell us, between our Commissioners and British Commissioners, for the purpose of renewing the commercial Convention which expires next year, and adjusting all other topics of difference or disagreement between the two nations, prove the existence of a reciprocal good feeling.—It is to be wished, that such agreements may be concluded between them, as shall revoke as to that power the operation of the Navigation Act, and as shall quiet forever the dispute about the fisheries, by the acknowledgment of our rights in that respect. There are other topics of negotiation, on which some stipulations may be looked for, not perhaps of less importance, but less prominent at the present moment, which will readily suggest themselves to the reflecting reader."

Gen. Jackson's Despatches.
It is stated in the Savannah Republican, of the 6th inst. that the Despatches from General Jackson, in relation to his Indian campaign, the capture of Pensacola, and the trial of Arbuthnot and Ambrister, which were put into the Post Office at Fort Hawkins, and directed to the Secretary of War; and which, as they did not reach the Secretary, were supposed to be lost; were at last found in the land office at Washington. It appears that they reached the seat of government in due season, and were carelessly conveyed to the wrong department, where they remained undiscovered, for more than two months.

The Indians.
The southern papers mention, that a large party of the Seminole Indians, who were emigrating farther back in the woods, had committed several murders on the frontier white people, and being pursued, were encountered and driven from their encampment with the loss of 10 or 12 killed. It would seem that these bipeds of the wilderness must be exterminated some way or other. They cannot associate themselves with the habits of civilized life.

Extraordinary Product.
It is mentioned in the Philadelphia American Daily Advertiser, that the proceeds of two pumpkin seeds, planted in May last, were gathered last week, on the ground of the late Rev. Dr. Blair, Germantown, when it appeared, that the exact weight of the whole was 1528 pounds; one of which measured six feet four inches in circumference, and weighed 131 pounds—there were several others nearly as large. We have heard of no increase in any part of the United States, which has exceeded this, at any time, or in any season.

Sickness at New-Orleans.
The yellow and bilious fevers have prevailed at New-Orleans but have been by no means formidable, yielding, in most cases, to the application of seasonable remedies. The greatest mortality during the height of the fever, was 57. The thermometer in the shade, the hottest day in the past summer, did not exceed 94 degrees; and it was so cold on the 18th ult. that the inhabitants were under the necessity of making fires.

Appointment.
General Robert Swartwout is appointed, by the President, to be Navy Agent at New-York, vice J. Bullus, deceased. There were nearly 800 applicants for the office.

Spanish Minister.
The Chevalier de Oñis, the Spanish Minister, arrived at Washington on Saturday last.

Chickasaw Treaty.
Gen. Jackson and Gov. Shelby, left Nashville on the 26th Sept. for the purpose of holding a Treaty with those Indians.

Married.
On Tuesday last, Mr. GEORGE C. MASON, to Miss ANNA M. MUMFORD, daughter of Benjamin B. Mumford Esq. of this town.

Died.
At Little-Compton, Mr. EZRA BARTLEY, aged 21 years.
At Bristol, JOSEPH REYNOLDS Esq. At Andover, (Mass.) Hon. THOMAS KITTREDGE, aged 75 years.
In North-Carolina, the Hon. DAVID STONE, one of the most distinguished citizens of that State.
In this town, on Sunday evening last, Mr. J. E. FOWNSHAW, aged 38 years. He was an affectionate husband, a tender parent, and a kind brother. Exercising patience and resignation to the Divine Will during a long sickness, he was enabled to meet Death with great serenity and composure.

Female Benevolent Society.

At a Special Meeting of the Directresses of the FEMALE BENEVOLENT SOCIETY, on Monday, Oct. 12, 1818.

THIS Meeting was called to revise a law which requires that all Children belonging to the Charity School of the Society shall attend in one place of worship on the Sabbath, under the care of the Directresses.
It was considered that when this law was enacted, the Children were claimed by no Society, and in general attended no place of worship.—But as Sabbath Schools are now established in several Churches and as it was the object of the law to ensure the attendance of the Children on public worship and instruction.
It is further considered that the law be so modified, that those Parents who desire their Children should attend any particular place of worship may have the privilege provided their Children shall be received into the Sabbath School of the church, or that any Directress or subscriber to the Society, will be responsible for their attendance on the public duties of the Sabbath.

Poetry.

From the London Literary Panorama.

ODE.

I LOVE to rise at dawn of day,
And in the woodlands wild to stray,
And musing linger there—
To ramble through the verdant fields,
And taste the sweets that nature yields,
And snuff the morning air.

I love to hear the warbling songs
That issue from the feather'd throngs,
And fields and forest fill—
To watch their motions as they fly,
To skim the earth, or scale the sky—
Or drink the murr'ring rill—

I love to view the cattle play
So grateful for returning day,
And gambol o'er the mead—
To see the dew-drop on the spray,
Glistening before the rising ray,
As brilliant lustre spread—

I love to see the country's wealth—
But more than all I love my Health,
Sweet maid of graceful mien;
And wherever her smiles prevail,
A mountain tops, or in the vale,
There will I still be seen;

Yes, dearest maid, thy blessings fair,
Come wafted on the morning air,
And gladden in the dew;
Thou bidd'st flocks, birds, and woods
Impart
Their various charms to please my heart,
Since thee in all I view—

Depriv'd of thee, these pleasures fail,
Nor charms the mountain, or the vale,
Or dew-drops on the spray;
The sun would dart its rays in vain—
Nor feather'd warblers ease my pain,
Or soothe the ling'ring day—

Then, Goddess, come, be still my guide,
O'er all my fleeting hours preside,
And in my walks attend;
At morning's dawn, beside the rill,
Or in the grove, I'll woo thee still,
My first, my only friend.

Washington's Farewell Address.

PROPOSALS, By Gideon Fairman, John Binns, and Charles H. Parker,

TO PUBLISH A SPLENDID EDITION OF Washington's Farewell Address TO THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES

THE world has seen enough of warriors and of heroes—enough of statesmen of men who have guided armies in the field, or dictated as sages in the cabinet, for the exclusive purpose of ambition. History, from its earliest page to the present day, has offered to our contemplation, only one Washington, but one MAN, whose dangers in war, and labors in peace were undertaken and supported with a single eye to the benefit of his country; whose wonderful and honorable success was the plain result of wisdom, design, valor in excess on a whom danger never expelled, defeat depressed, who, persevering in the justice of his cause, would victory till he won her; who covered no reward, but the well earned approbation of those whose interests he lived to promote; who renounced all public honors, when they ceased to be the necessary instrument of good to the people, whose gratitude conferred them; who, superior to all monarchy, was content to be called an American citizen. His career of glory through life was unstained by crime; and his death was felt as a loss by every individual of that community whose political existence was sustained by his exertions.

The Farewell Address of General Washington is the condensed result of long experience, mature reflection and strong anxiety for the permanent prosperity of his country. His advice concerning the great importance of maintaining and solemnly the federal Union, that danger of indulging in much party feelings; the necessity of supporting public credit at home, or maintaining public faith in all our transactions with foreign nations, of encouraging foreign intercourse free from foreign attachments; are so many lessons of prudence, which we should all well to bear in constant remembrance. Why, therefore, should not this legacy of wisdom and affection be so published, as to remain before our eyes, and to serve as a monument to guide our public councils, and to remind us that the author lives in our memories?

To make it such, is the aim of the proposed edition.

The publishers are determined, that the Address shall be printed on a paper of the same quality and size as the splendid edition of the Declaration of Independence now engraving and that in all respects be a companion worthy the great state paper.

As errors are known, from various causes, to find their way into the most important writings, the publishers feel it their duty, not only to satisfy themselves, but to satisfy the public of the authenticity of the copy from which this splendid edition of the Farewell Address shall be published.

Mr. GEORGE BRIDPORT will complete the design of the book, the following is an outline. The introductory part of the Address in English, finished in a monumental penmanship, shall form the upper part, the other parts of the plate shall be enriched by appropriate ornaments; in the centre below shall be engraved, from an historical design for this publication, by Mr. TULLY, the surrender of the British army at Yorktown, October 19, 1781.

The Address itself shall be printed with type of a peculiar and appropriate character, designed for this purpose by Mr. Fairman, to be cut and cast by our best artists. No more of the type shall be cast than would be necessary to execute this Address; and when it shall be completed, the type and the matrices in which it was cast, shall be utterly destroyed, so that no other work shall ever be executed by the same letter which shall have printed the "Farewell Address" of him who lived and died for the peace of his country, and first in the hearts of his countrymen.

The paper of the first quality, 36 by 26 inches, will be made by Mr. Ames. The task shall be carefully prepared, and of the best materials.

The signature of General Washington, from which it is proposed to execute a fac simile or this publication, is that which he affixed to the constitution of the United States, when he signed it as President of the Convention in which it was framed—his associating and concentrating one of the greatest events in the life of this great man, and in the history of his country.

The ornamental writing will be designed and executed in the very best manner; the ornamental part of the design and vignette will be engraved by FAIRMAN and typographical part executed by JOHN BINNS.

They will take especial care of the execution of their several duties in these respects, and they will call to the aid all that liberal, moral and useful command from the sciences and the arts, so as to make the Farewell Address no mean specimen of the state of the fine arts in the United States.

As much progress has already been made in designing and procuring materials for this splendid edition of General Washington's Farewell Address, it is expected will be ready for delivery, with the splendid edition of the Declaration of Independence, in the month of December next. That the public may have a more perfect view of the design and style of execution, than can be given in a proposal, of the tribute to the memory of him who was the conqueror for the freedom of his country; a legislature for its security; a magistrate for its happiness! it is not intended to solicit any subscriptions until the ornamental parts of the piece shall be executed.—It will then be submitted for public inspection and public patronage, at five dollars a copy, payable on delivery of the engraving.
